Acknowledgements

Many people deserve recognition and thanks for their support throughout this book project, and there are too many to mention them all. However, some we would like to highlight.

First of all, we would like to thank Andrew Baird at Palgrave for his support for this project. We are also indebted to Spyros Economides, Kevin Featherstone, and Şevket Pamuk for their support and their enthusiasm for this project. They have been really kind to us and encouraged us to publish this book in their series on New Perspectives on South-East Europe.

We would furthermore like to thank Canterbury Christ Church University, and here especially Dr. David Bates. This book is based on a research workshop that was held in Canterbury in May 2012, and Canterbury Christ Church University kindly provided the financial support for this workshop via the REF 2012/2013 fund. The University of Passau has also kindly funded a follow-up workshop in November 2012, and has provided financial assistance for the final edits of the manuscript.

We are also really grateful to Trish Moore, who brought a fresh set of eyes to the project. Furthermore, this project would not have been possible without the hard work of Christine Wüst, who was in charge of the final editing, the index and the overall coordination of this book project. Without her, we would have been unable to finish it to this high standard, and she has really contributed massively to the finalization of this project.

Finally, we wish to thank a number of family members, friends and colleagues for their support, in particular Zeynep Arkan, Florian Bieber, Sarah Lieberman, Valery Perry and Jens Woelk. Finally we would like to thank our families, Claire and Malindi and Stefanie and Lotti for their love and support. Without their patience and encouragement it would have not been possible to complete this volume and spend so many hours on researching the foreign policies of the post-Yugoslav states. This book is dedicated to them.

Canterbury and Passau,
May 2014

Contributors

Katrin Boeckh, PhD, is senior researcher in the Institute for East and Southeast European Studies Regensburg and extraordinary professor for East and Southeast European history at the Ludwig-Maximilians-University of Munich. Her areas of research are ethno-national conflicts and their consequences, state and church relations in socialist countries, institutions in late Stalinism and the discourse of values during transformation, with a regional focus on the Ukraine and the countries of Yugoslavia. Her main publications are: Von den Balkankriegen zum Ersten Weltkrieg. Kleinstaatenpolitik und ethnische Selbstbestimmung auf dem Balkan (München 1996); Stalinismus in der Ukraine: Die Rekonstruktion des sowjetischen Systems nach dem Zweiten Weltkrieg (Wiesbaden 2007); [with Ekkehard Völkl] Ukraine. Von der Roten zur Orangenen Revolution (Regensburg 2007); Serbien. Montenegro. Geschichte und Gegenwart (Regensburg 2009); [et al.] The Empire Is Dead, Long Live the Empire! Long-Run Persistence of Trust and Corruption in the Bureaucracy (Regensburg 2010), Osteuropa Institut. Mitteilungen. No. 60.

Ana Bojinović-Fenko is Assistant Professor and Researcher at University of Ljubljana, Faculty of Social Sciences in Slovenia. Her research focuses on international regionalism (in the Mediterranean region), on foreign policy of (small) states and on external action of the EU (particularly the enlargement and neighbourhood policies). Her recent article titled Compatibility of regionalizing actors' activities in the Mediterranean region: what kind of opportunity for the European Union? was published in the Journal of Southeast European & Black Sea studies in September 2012.

Jelena Džankić, PhD, is a Marie Curie Fellow at the European University Institute in Florence, Italy. Her research focuses on the interplay between citizenship, state and nation building processes and Europeanization in the post-Yugoslav states. Her other research interest includes the politics of Montenegro, and her book Citizenship in Bosnia Herzegovina, Macedonia and Montenegro; Effects of Statehood and Identity Challenges is forthcoming with Ashgate in June 2015.

Amelia Hadfield, PhD, is Senior Lecturer in International Relations at Canterbury Christ Church University, in the United Kingdom. Her research examines both the nexus of foreign policy analysis and international relations theory, and key facets of EU foreign policy, including neighbourhood, development and EU-Russia relations. Co-editor in chief of the online journal Politics and Governance (Cogitatio), her work on EU foreign affairs appears in the Annual Review of the Journal of Common Market Studies (July 2013), with research on foreign policy featuring in the textbook that she co-edited with Steve Smith and Tim Dunne: Foreign Policy: Theories, Actors, Cases (OUP 2012).

Adnan Huskić is a PhD candidate at the University of Graz and Lecturer in International Relations and Politics at Sarajevo School of Science and Technology in Bosnia and Herzegovina. His research focuses on the role of external actors in post-conflict power-sharing arrangements. He works for the Friedrich Naumann Stiftung für die Freiheit in Bosnia and Herzegovina and provides frequent comments and analyses for media in the Western Balkans.

Soeren Keil, PhD, is Senior Lecturer in International Relations at Canterbury Christ Church University in the United Kingdom. His research focuses on the political systems of the post-Yugoslav states, as well as territorial autonomy as a mode of conflict-resolution and the foreign policy of new states (particularly in the Balkans). His book Multinational Federalism in Bosnia and Herzegovina was published with Ashgate in December 2013.

Cvete Koneska holds a PhD in Politics from University of Oxford. Her research focuses on post-conflict politics in the Balkans, ethno-national conflicts, and foreign policy (EU and NATO integration). Her book After Ethnic Conflict: Policy-Making in Post-Conflict Bosnia and Macedonia will be published by Ashgate in November 2014.

Mladen Mladenov is a PhD candidate and lecturer in International Relations at the University of Passau in Germany. His research interests lie in the field of Serbian foreign policy as well as in an experimental approach to Europeanization research in Serbia.

Gëzim Krasniqi is a PhD candidate in Sociology and Research Assistant on the CITSEE project at the University of Edinburgh. His main research interests are politics, nationalism, nationalist movements and citizenship. He has published several articles on the politics of the Balkan region in general and Kosovo in particular.

Zlatko Šabič is a Professor of International Relations at the University of Ljubljana, Faculty of Social Sciences. His research focus is on international institutions. His recent project was on Regional and International Relations of Central Europe (Palgrave, 2012) where he has co-authored a chapter (with Annette Freyberg-Inan) on relations between Central European states and the Balkans.

Senada Šelo Šabić works as a scientific associate in the Institute for Development and International Relations in Zagreb. Her research interests include Croatian foreign policy, Western Balkans and Turkey, EU Enlargement, development cooperation and migration. She is editor-in-chief of the Croatian International Relations Review and is an external teacher at the Faculty of Political Science, University of Zagreb. Senada is the author of a monograph State Building under Foreign Supervision: Intervention in Bosnia and Herzegovina 1996-2003, in addition to several book chapters and articles. Senada received several distinguished academic grants, the most recent the Fulbright Scholars' Program Fellowship in 2011.

Bernhard Stahl is Professor of International Politics at the University of Passau (GER). His research areas cover European foreign policy (German, French and EU foreign policy in particular) preferably vis-à-vis SEE, identity theory, and comparative regionalism. From 2004 to 2008 he worked as Professor of European Integration on behalf of the German Ministry of Economic Co-operation in Serbia. His recent publications deal with domestic legitimation of military interventions (e.g. Germany and Libya) and identity-related problems in the accession process (e.g. the EU and Serbia).
